

IN SOCIAL CIRCLES

SOCIETY FOLK are launching the season of festivity and amusement earlier this winter than usual and in a way that indicates a busier winter than ever, and Anaconda never lacked for social amusements.

The opening ball of the season was well attended, and the echoes of the music scarce died away before the young folks were planning to give another one. A fact that provoked considerable comment was the change in the personnel of the attendance. Most of the old-time dancers were there, but there were many familiar faces who were missed amid the throng, and the ladies whispered about it behind their fans, and as the gentlemen lounged in the lobby, between puffs, they wondered where was Joe, Dick, Bob, Red, Doc, Jim, Will and the rest of the old gang. The conclusion reached was that they are engaged by the realities of life, or are wrapped up in thoughts of events in prospect, doing their waltzing in private, meanwhile. Though so many were missing the attendance was large, and the vacant places were filled by newcomers, who were just as gay as those who seem to be retiring, and the old reliables enjoyed the novelty of new partners with all the zest of auld lang syne. Professor Kennicot had an excellent company of musicians, whose music was most inspiring. After the ball, which was over early as the custom goes with this set, there were a number of little suppers set by the young ladies at their homes, to which congenial groups adjourned and enjoyed a dainty repast served by fair hands. The young men must beware of these little suppers; they have a demoralizing influence, and it is a decidedly fetching sensation when the fair partner of the mazy waltz pours tea, that is likely to bring the stubborn bachelor to his knees and the altar. But the dances, the supper and all are decidedly pleasant affairs as all well know.

Among those who attended the hop were these: Messrs and Mesdames T. J. McKenzie, Reid, Berraud, Adams, Odson and Wasson; Misses Navarre, Peters, O'Donnell, Douglass, Rutledge, Durston, Webb, O'Meara, Johnson, Condon, Mathes, Canovan, Marks and Blair; and Messrs. Healy, Flynn, Kelly, Reagan, Blair, Morgan, Walker, Ainslie, Bowers, Herzog, R. DeB. Smith, Tolan, Brennan, J. C. Williams, Hamill, Morrell, Flory, Stapleton, Thofehr, MacDonald, LaSalle, Cany, Ashford, Wright, Ewart, J. A. Hoge.

The dance given by the Hibernian Knights Monday evening at the Auditorium was a very pleasant affair, and was enjoyed by the frequenters of the popular hall to the utmost extent. The bright uniforms of the Knights, the fair, happy faces of their ladies, and their dresses made the scene one of beauty and the hours very happy ones.

Among the coming events are the benefit ball to T. K. Wills, to be given by his friends in Professor Wasterlain's band, which will furnish the music.

Golf and its fascinations are fastening upon certain of the young folk, and the ladies are taking an interest in the game, which is certain to popularize it at once.

Miss Blanche Mathes gave an impromptu little party on Tuesday evening, which was a delightful occasion. Those who enjoyed it were Misses V. Douglas, H. Webb, Laura Durston and Blanche Mathes; Messrs. Ham, Brenner, Flory and Herzog.

IN BUTTE.

Cards have been the order of the week in Butte. Every day has seen one or more card parties and there has been little going on in social circles except the playing of cards. The one exception of the week was the delightful dancing party given on Monday evening by Miss Dollie Noyes in honor of Miss Curtis of Helena. The Noyes residence was beautifully decorated. Marjorie's orchestra furnished inspiring music, the refreshments were choice, the costumes were bewitching, the young people were gay, and altogether the party was as merry as anyone could wish.

On Monday afternoon the Ladies' Whist club held its first meeting of the season. It was entertained by Mrs. John E. Davies. The first prize was won by Mrs. Hoatson and the second by Mrs. Thompson Campbell.
